

In the month of January, 1914, the mean barometric pressure was the greatest on record; the amount of sunshine was the greatest on record, and there was no rainfall; the first rainless January since 1884. The mean amount of cloud was the least on record, except in 1902 when it was 35%, or 4% less than in 1914. (This was the sunniest January on record until 1914.) The mean temperature (62.°8) has only been exceeded on 3 occasions; namely, in 1897 and 1902, (63.°1) and in 1901 (64.°9).
